

Girl Goodwill

Success & Equality Step 11

Make room for other girls and women to share in success.

I received an invitation to a dinner meeting for business women. I attended. The two presenters were good and presented useful information, but attendance was low.

Some months later I was doing research for one of my books. An organization that fit into the topic of one chapter held information meetings at breakfast, lunch, and supper sessions for two days. I attended one lunch session and one dinner session. Several other people attended the lunch session, but no one else attended the dinner session. I asked the organizers about attendance at their breakfast sessions. The breakfast sessions had attracted more participants than the lunch and dinner sessions.

I contacted the woman who hosted the dinner meeting for business women and let her know that she would probably have more participants at breakfast sessions. She was grateful for information that could help her host well-attended meetings.

Paula Kramer
Girl Goodwill Founder

Updated July 6, 2013

For more information see the Girl Goodwill page at speakingfromtriumph.com