

Girl Goodwill

Success & Equality Step 8

Ask other girls and women for help, but avoid expecting more than they can give.

I had just received word that my best friend had died of a heart attack about 80 miles from home. Since I was named as the emergency contact, I needed to go to the area where the death occurred and identify the body. Grief stricken, I sought solace from my long time neighbors. The first offered sympathy and tried to console me. The second, an 85 year old lady, immediately offered to go with me. The kindness in her offer and her company on that trip will forever be an act of goodwill that I remember and embrace until the day I die.
